Broker Prelicensing

This is the required course you need in preparation to become a “provisional broker.” This course covers basic real estate principles and practices, including real estate law, contracts, brokerage practices, financing, closing, valuation, fair housing, property management, taxation, and mathematics as well as other related topics.

Students will take an in-class final exam, and MUST have a 80% or above grade to pass the class in 2017. The student can then apply with the North Carolina Real Estate Commission to take the state exam and must have a 75% or above grade to receive a real estate provisional license. The provisional broker must then take three additional post licensing classes over the following three years to become a licensed real estate broker. This is a requirement to become a N.C. licensed real estate broker.
